

ECNAIS CONFERENCE

Sofia, Bulgaria

Thursday 23rd to Saturday 25th April 2009

Benchmarks and Values.

The Educational Systems in Europe are challenged by globalization.

In Europe there is an increasing tendency to collect, publish and compare the statistical data produced by the measurable outcome of National educational systems, or indeed, of individual schools. This is the result of academic testing such as PISA and National age-based tests.

These results are being used by politicians and the public as the basis on which to compare the success or failure of the systems or the schools.

At the same time, there is a growing awareness throughout Europe, of the need for Values within societies and communities and a desire to preserve national cultural identities.

Independent schools have been dedicated to the promotion of values and the concept of the “whole child” as an essential part of an education.

This conference will consider the conflict between education to benchmarks or values, and how the Independent schools may achieve a balance between them within the framework of modern society and the demands of democracy and human rights conventions.
